Customers

"We are proud to be the first in Redmond to provide this modern, environmentally friendly amenity to our residential community. With the advent of electric cars, it is increasingly important to provide a charging infrastructure for apartment residents who share a common garage."

-- Karen Caplan,
VP of Property Management
Equity Residential

"Seward Park turned 50 last year, and we took a look at what could we do to become a greener co-op. We have four stations. For people in Seward Park who own a car and are interested in buying an EV, there's now a way for them to charge it privately."

-- Joanna Hackney

Alliance Residential Company

"We are committed to respecting the environment and operating sustainable communities. Offering these charging stations is consistent with how we are designing new buildings and instituting 'green' standards throughout our communities."

"The installation of the charging stations is in keeping with our commitment to extend our green philosophy beyond the corporate office to the commercial and residential units we own and manage."

"We anticipate that many of these vehicle owners will also be apartment renters. By installing the stations, we're catering to residents who aren't able to charge their cars at home unless they buy and install their own station."
